March 6) with music and visuals by:

Monty Cantsin
(Gabriel Saloman)

Gretchen Snakes
(Nü Sensae / Heavy Chains)

Plus screenings of Robert Filliou's historic 1970s
Western Front performances, including *Video Breakfasting
If You Wish* (1979) and Tele-pathic Music No 7 (1977).

The Eternal Network, so named by the French Fluxus artists Robert Filliou and George Brecht in 1965, exists through the collective and continued efforts of artists around the world.

The night revisits the Western Front's role as an important historical node in the Eternal Network with the online publication of Ken Becker's essay "Not Just Some Canadian Hippie Bullshit" forthcoming in Fillip 20 (Spring 2015).
